Funeral In Lethbridge

A prominent hotel man and resident of Alberta since 1901, passed away at an early hour in Champion, Tuesday morning, April 10th, in the person of Ermengildo Cemolini. Deceased had been around all day in apparently his usual health, had assisted the auditor during the day and was taken away very suddenly, passing away a short time later from heart failure.

Deceased was born in Sedegliano, Italy, in 1889, and was consequently in his 51st year.

In 1901 he came to Canada setting at Michel, B. C., and 16 years later moved to Lethbridge where he ran a second hand store. In 1922 he married Miss Margherita Ottogalli of Bourg, Italy, residing at Tabor, where he was engaged in the hotel and farming business until 1928, when with his family he moved to Champion where he purchased the Savoy hotel. He later sold the hotel and returned to Italy, remaining there until 1931, when he came back and re-purchased the business. He was operating the hotel at the time of his death. While of a decidedly quiet disposition he still made many friends, all of whom he retained. He was one of the most successful hotel managers in southern Alberta, and his removal will be the cause of widespread regret.

The late Mr. Cemolini was a member of the village council at the time of his death and was also associated with the most successful hotel managers in southern Alberta, and his removal will be the cause of widespread regret.

The late Mr. Cemolini was a member of the village council at the time of his death and was also associated with the most successful hotel managers in southern Alberta, and his removal will be the cause of widespread regret.

The funeral took place on Friday, service being held in St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church in Lethbridge. A large number of friends from Champion, Calgary, Lethbridge, Blairmore, Coleman and points south turned out to do the last honors, and the profusion of flowers added mute testimony to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

The pall-bearers were: Alex Remondi, Champion; Romeo Remondi, Blairmore; Pete Remondi, Coleman; Guy Remondi, Coleman; S. G. Dapalonia, Coleman and G. Montino, Coleman.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to Mrs. Cemolini and the girls in their sudden and sad bereavement.

The record of the oil business is is written less in its annual statements than in the kind lives of thousands of oil men who have benefited from its operation.

The wealth it produces has gone to the owners of the soil, to the men who have worked it, to thousands who have labored to drive of trucks and operators of service stations in towns and cities, to pioneers of progress in laboratories, to thousands of investors (most of these of small means than large), to the oil companies, to all manner of oil men, to oil companies, to oilmen of philathropic institutions, to owners of real estate, to suppliers of products, and to governments.

When governments take oil rents by way of tax levies, it is only common sense that they may as often they do, the vast numbers of the people whom the industry supports.

The activities of this highly organized industry keep wealth moving in all directions today. The oil industry is intricately woven into the industrial and business fabric of the nation. Art 10.

George Roberts of Lethbridge has been appointed temporary manager of the Savoy hotel, due to the sudden death of Mr. E. Cemolini.

Discuss Franchise

D. King of Condale, was chairman and G. K. McLean, secretary of a meeting held in Lethbridge Wednesday evening between representatives from the towns along the line to discuss the franchise with the Calgary Power Co. It was agreed that there should be a reduction in the rates; this will be discussed again at a meeting to be held in Macleod on Wednesday afternoon, April 28th, at 3 p. m.

W.I. Conference Reported

The eight members of the Women's Institute and the three visitors who braved the dust storm to the meeting after noon to attend the meeting held at the home of Mrs. A. W. Jopling, were well rewarded for their courage. Many visitors came under discussion and committees were appointed to deal with same, but the outstanding feature of the program was the verbatim report given by Mrs. Friesen in a delightful and entertaining manner which brought to her hearers glimpses of what transpired at the District Conference in Lethbridge recently.

Mrs. E. L. Bequart was appointed official delegate to the Alberta Women's Institutes Convention to be held in Calgary May 26th to 29th.

The members expressed themselves as desirous of co-operating with the school board and others in promoting some form of celebration for Coronation Day, also of welcoming home daughters, Rheta, Linda and two Peter Goria; three brothers, Joe, Dawson, M. L. A. Speaker of the House, Frank of Michel, and E. Cemolini of Spokane; and one sister, Mrs. A. Turco, of Sedegliano, Italy. His mother and father preceded him.

In discussing "Ways and Means," it was decided to serve supper at the dance on Friday, April 16th.

Following the National Anthem, delicious refreshments were provided by the visitors, and she was assisted in serving by Mrs. R. D. Families and Miss Ruth Jopling.

One new member was added to the roll.

Dow - Fleming

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Central United church, Calgary on Friday, April 2nd when Miss Ethel Fleming, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fleming of Champion became the bride of Mr. Guy Dow of Champion, the Rev. E. Melville Aitken officiating. They were attended by Mrs. Aitken and J. O. Bell of Champion. Mr. and Mrs. Dow will reside on the farm at Champion.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Dow received the best wishes of the community when over seventy-three guests called at their home on Monday evening to pay their respects. Mr. and Mrs. Dow excelled in their ability as hosts and everyone present enjoyed themselves to the utmost. The Jolly couple was brought to a close by singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Made Good Golf Score

M. G. Clever made the local golf course in 37 in his opening game of the season on Sunday morning. The par of the course is 35 and the above score is envied by many a golfer in Champion. Mr. Clever has always been an enthusiastic golfer and as he is nearing his 60th year we feel that this proves that he is not yet ready to relinquish his title as one of Champion's best golfers.

The Community Newspaper

Few people appreciate in anything like full measure the tremendous influence for good exerted by the country weekly newspapers of the western provinces in the communities they serve and the quality of the service rendered by the proprietors and editors of these weekly symposiums of world, national and local current events.

Whether it is the well-conducted and discriminatingly edited column weekly—and that means the great majority of them—fulfills an extremely important function in the town and rural district in which it circulates. Nothing else that the subscriber purchases can be bought to yield such value for such a small monetary consideration.

Value is not only in quantity of material does the subscriber receive great value for a single cent—outlay but the quality of the merchandise offered to the purchaser of the paper is an unparalleled tribute to the discernment, ability and integrity of the proprietor who shapes its course and determines its policies.

A critical analysis of the contents of the average issue of the mill-run country weekly in the west demonstrates that considerable discernment is exercised in the news items presented to their readers, that a high moral tone dictates the selection of material to be presented to the community of a high order is invariably maintained throughout the columns whether devoted to world events or to small local occurrences.

Partly because of this all-pervading tone permeating from the first page to the last and partly because many homes the local weekly is the sole periodical to which the average person no literature is more consistently and carefully read or with such close attention, including the advertisements, than the country weekly newspaper.

Another factor which commends the country weekly to its readers and approvers is the eminently sane outlook of its proprietor and editor in approaching the problems of the day—whether they be political, social, religious or economic. These interests invariably reflect a breadth of vision and spirit of tolerance as much needed in a world gone mad and at a time when too many turn aside to follow false gods or pursue spurious ambitions and "isms".

Then, too, much of the extraordinary influence exerted by the country weekly newspaper should be attributed to the liberal spirit devoted to pio- niers which have as their objective some betterment of the community by movement or improvement of the town and district. In this respect owners and editors give much of their time and energy to worthy causes which have no recompense other than the satisfaction which comes from having an active participation in the welfare project.

Alongside the more inspiring and voluminous metropolitan daily which is "sufficient unto the day" for its clientele, the country weekly paper may appear comparatively insignificant, but the latter is picked up, read and re-read and its entire content of news, editorial content and advertising is digested and re-digested for a week until the succeeding issue comes in and then again for a week, thus assiduously and intensive study and reflection which the weekly newspaper insures that it yields such an important influence on its readers.

The country weekly also can be counted upon for loyalty to its readers, subscribers and advertisers, for justifiable pride in the town and district which it serves and in the worthiness of support, in season and out of season, given to the meeting of the local and travel, the local sports organizations, the local churches and people of the district for the local paper is a co-operative enterprise, even though privately owned.

Without the services of a sound, sane country newspaper, any community is bound to suffer and many worthy local ventures would languish and wither away and without the whole-hearted support of the many individuals which make up the local paper would lapse into a decline and eventually inherit a lamentable fate.

The fact that the great majority of the country weeklies have survived the grueling test of a depression of unprecedented length and excessive severity—and the casualties have been surprisingly few—speaks volumes for the high regard in which they are held, perhaps often unconsciously, by the people they have served, and are serving so well and so tenaciously, despite great handicaps.

Public Too Curious

People Barred From Parks Of Wind-sor Great Parks

The decision was finally arrived at, to close to the public parts of Windsor Great Park near the Royal Lodge to secure privacy for the King and Queen is a lesson to people who have been indoctrinated in this country, comments a writer in the London Daily Sketch. The ruling may be relaxed later if conditions improve. The King and Queen like to regard Royal Lodge and the Great Park as a part of their private lives.

For years there has been a standing reward of $1,000 for one pound of manufactured comb-honey.

A bud has the remarkable power to reproduce every part of a tree, stem, foliage, branches and fruit.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

YOU lose vital nerve force if you allow your stomach to distress you. And when you are gorged, gas or biliousness and "comes" you are likely to be poisoned and will eventually die. This is what W. J. Fisher, of New York, says.

"I suffered with my stomach, could eat but little, and was weak and listless. I grew weaker daily and suffered from headache, dizziness, and loss of weight, 20 pounds. I took Dr. Fisher's Golden Medical Diet, and within a week I was well again. I gained in weight and strength and finally I gained my weight back. The Doctor gave a well poised of me. Say now!"

They provide for their aged and needy through "gift" festivals, a noted German scientist, Dr. Hans Haudorf, comments a writing in the London Daily Sketch. The ruling may be relaxed later if conditions improve.

The King and Queen like to regard Royal Lodge and the Great Park as a part of their private lives.

The gifts are piled up and then distributed by the most respected man, to the old and poor first.

This is the custom of the Eskimos for many members of the community, since many suffer undeservedly, being both incapable or unfortunate.

Preservation Of Liberty

American-British Friendship Best Guarantees Of World Peace

Under the heading "hang together or hang alone," an editorial in the New York Daily News endorsed that part of the speech of the president at the United States naval academy in which the governor-general of Canada said:

"—American and British navies are united by the same purpose—the preservation of liberty and peace."

The news foresees difficulties if an attempt were made to put a formal naval and military alliance between Britain and the United States through parliament or congress. "We would hardly like to see ourselves up in an agreement to help Britain fight Italy or Russia," it says. "It would be better if we could be tied up to us for some conceivable South American or Mexican war."

"But for the two of us to keep our informal friendship unfailingly warm is a common desire . . . as long as two nations are of the same mind, two powerful navies, any nation will think a long time before picking a fight with either Britain or ourselves."

The editorial added that American-British friendship is not only natural, "but is also, as Lord Tweedsmuir says, the best guarantee of both nations' safety and the best insurance against another world war."

Mahatma Gandhi

Reported To Be Leading The Life Of A Typical Villager

Mahatma Gandhi is now leading a life of a typical villager.

He has taken permanent residence in a hut on the outskirts of Shegaon village, seven miles from Wardha (Central Provinces). His wife is with him, and his son, 12, is with the latter goes daily to his master. The road to Shegaon lies partly through fields which become a morass during the monsoon, making communication difficult.

Mostly the houses are huts, some thatched, some scattered about the village. Gandhi's home, which is a tiled hut of mud, has an airy hall in the center which serves as his study, a kitchen, dormitory and bath complete the home. At the side is a small stable for goats.

Gandhi has no program for the future these days aside from his daily schedule. The villagers attend his open-air prayers at dawn and dusk.

Not content with that, he returned to bring an unconscious crewman to the surface, and then, being sure the eggs are damaged, one at a time. U.S. Air Base

To Set Aside 900 Acres Near Fairbanks, Alaska
President Roosevelt set aside 900 acres near Fairbanks as a prospective site for the United States army's proposed $10,000,000 air base there.

An exclusive order prohibiting settlers from entering the area said the land was being "reserved for use of the war department for military purposes." Army sources, however, described the site as a possible location for the new base.

CHAPTER III.

Jack Trueman's dog was a black and white bob-tail. It was the general purpose dog of a driver's type; and he was all that. Jack claimed to own the sharp-eyed, self-reliant fellow—but that was a matter of opinion, of course. In the dog's day, more or less, when owner owned Jack Trueman; and Trueman—he owned me. When a smart, clever dog has something of his own boy, you understand—say a smelly bone, or a morsel of bacon, or what he thinks highly of his own property. And he puts up with the smell of his own bone and the kick of his own boy as one of the inconveniences of proprietorship, just the same as you and I put up with the smell of our wives.

Rover liked, at times, to have his boy throw sticks for him; and, of course, sticks can not be thrown if they are not fetched. But he only means that sort of thing by "fetched." When the boy ceased to amuse him, he would cock his leg against a post, and then run away on business of his own. This was clear evidence, you will agree, that Rover was the chief executive.

Jack Trueman had bought the dog, nor had he been given the dog. One day, Rover had left the driver's team he was looking after, and had dropped in, calling him by the name at the side of the stable in the rear of the Tavern Tyrone. He fancied the look of the place and the smell of the shop bucket. Offhand, he decided he would like to own a boy with lively manners, and a good temper. A priest walked beside him. Behind them strolled a hangman, who was closely masked.

It was a matter of good fortune that the priest had come that day—the a-miser maker makes speech and export the public. A hasty cheer went up as William Turney stepped smartly forward to make his speech from the galleries. His was a hearty voice, and his voice was loud and clear.

"Die-like—a man!" shouted loud-mouthed Michael, the smuggler.

Turney had been making his rounds, his journeys taking him to Markham Village. He dropped into a local store one dark night to get a jug of whiskey to take to an apple-peeling bee. At the clerk, McPhilips, he said, "I'll be back in a minute." Turney staved the man's skull with a hammer; and then rifled the till. He turned on the spigot, blew out the candles, closed the door, and, with a single blow, was home to bed. The dead body was not found till the morning after. No one had seen Turney abroad the night before. He came under suspicion the next day, but he rode to Toronto on a borrowed horse, and purloined his cash money, a pair of boots and a leather jacket. But that, you'll agree, was not hanging evidence.

Turney, however, never admitted for his defense, and while lying in gaol at Toronto he got a letter smuggled to his wife. The poor simple woman was no scholar; and she asked the letter-teller the sum of money was hidden under a loose board in the floor of their backhouse at Markham Village. He made her get the letter out, and then he went to a lawyer and got a writ of habeas corpus. So the damage was leaked out. How much wiser to have let the solicitor's clerk visit the privy!

On the scaffold Turney made a rousing speech. He shouted to us that he had been a British soldier all his day, and was not afraid of death. Turney thanked us kindly for the compliment of coming to his hanging. He had the gall to thank the poor man, McPhilips, who had never hurt him and had treated him as a friend. The crime, he told us, had not been planned, but was done on the spur of the moment.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Barzth entertained at dinner on Sunday when their guests included Miss Mary Bowman and Jim Bowman.

Experiences of the Pioneers

Mrs. R. S. Bond, the retiring President of the Cleverly Pioneer Club has rendered a second service beyond those required of her. She has written an excellent poem entitled "Our Pioneers". We are only too pleased to receive her permission to publish it. Her advice is this, cut it out and save it and when you wish to recall old times just get it out and read it again.

Now all you old Timers, just listen and ponder; And all you new Timers, tune in and wonder; About some of the things of olden times; We had to live in rooms, that had only one window; Holes nailed for tables, and chairs without backs; Where the range cattle milled around by the thousands, And often made visits right up to your door. They made you feel creepy, shakey, and frightened, For when you drove them away they often got sore. We had to walk miles to town in a distance; And we had to walk miles to town in a distance; Time never meant so very much to us. When you met your neighbor you chatted and smiled. You never waited for an invitation to visit your neighbor it seems. You were always assured of a hearty welcome. And a good old pot of beans.

The school was a central place to meet, Sundays we had to go to town and hold a school once a week. We had a choral club, the Guild, F-r-socals, Educational, and our character to build. At different homes we held our meetings. The hostess met you with hearty greetings. Every mom, woman and child for miles around, Began to eat at the table when they would be found. We often had to sit in the dark rooms, Time to go home came only too soon.

We had a baseball team in 1908. And we all thought it was great. There were Martin, Fred, Bill, Herman, Barney and Jack. How they all played, and how they worked. We worked and shopped in the opposing teams. Were always in the right, to us it seemed. The ladies would scream at one another. But we will suppose it was only a pose, For we never blacked an eye or bloodied a nose.

We held our stampedes on the open prairie, We had the best time, and we had the best fun. I found a hole around the old Outlaw, And watched how his saddle was cinched. When that old boy began to kick, Kick it and spewed, showed all the rest of his stuff. When he came for you, you would try to duck, And when he hit you, you would yell. And when he hit you, you would yell. Giverville was the scene of many a fray. There where the Community assembled to play. The no. 1 hall was there where staged their fights. Three pool balls, knocked out lights. And Joe St. Luke brandished a knife. I believe he had an enemy he wanted to slice. We had to go to town to buy our rumpages. Gun in hand up the street he did rage. But I can say I am glad to admit, That many a one of the citizens was hit.

We girls talked of girls in a remote way, Thought's of owning one made us feel quite gay. News of a new dress recently made, Was the talk of the day, and the latest bakes. It had arrived from the outside.

With several frocks, coat and hat besides, We would all look with envy and lust in our eyes. Till the poor woman would think her clothes she must hide. We girls were quite popular. I see you're surprised.

Wait for a moment, and I will open your eyes. We would go to the dances, wear any old rig. No party dresses, or vanity bag. We didn't need them to vamp the stage. But one little catch I must concede, The boys there in number, were far in the lead.

The girls there were the scene of many a dance. In an eight by ten, around the room we would prance. Our lunches were not very enticing. Some sandwiches were like a sandwich without bread. Dishes, sandwiches were not in our line. Too busy having a whale of a time.

The barrel-its around were very numerous. The girls so scarce it was almost humorous. The boys thought the girls a wonderful prize. I never of the girls to use their eyes. They had their choice of twenty men. From the first to the last, we were in a whirl. But one bachelor they didn't start. We still have John, of which you are aware.

Stanley was our nearest town.

Twenty-five miles never got us down,

Made the trip with horse and wagon.

Took two days to be home again.

No car, no bus, no telephone, no telephone of a break.

If a Wizard was following close to your wake,

Just some of the chances Pioneers had to risk.

To blare the trails for communities like this.

Mrs. R. S. Bond.
